

Employees are quicker to sue in today's sluggish economy. Learn how to prepare during a free seminar.

As the economy slows and companies tighten their belts, employees are more likely to become disgruntled and assert employment-related claims. But with proper policies, procedures and training, employers can combat employee lawsuits.

Higginbotham and Underwood, Perkins & Ralston, P.C., a Dallas law firm, are hosting a seminar for employers to learn ways of protecting against common claims made by employees. Attorney Douglas Bracken will address:

- Harassment, unpaid overtime and retaliation claims
- Changes to the Family and Medical Leave Act
- Confidential information safeguarding practices
- Email and electronic information policies

You are invited to join us for this free luncheon at Underwood, Perkins & Ralston, P.C. Please RSVP to Sheila Desso at sdesso@higginbotham.net or (214) 360-6885.
